“Who Now Shall Believe That Liar, Merlin?”: The Prophecies of Merlin in History

And when they see anyone they know at once what he is, whether barbarian or Greek; for they approach a Greek with beatings of the wings and with caresses and they make a joyful noise but they fly about the others on hostile wings and approach them with a horrible sound as though they were enemies. Since Beverley is only 25 miles from York, one must assume that the version found its way to Alfred through William Fitz Herbert.

The Prophecies of Merlin

After this shall the red dragon return to his proper manners, and turn his rage upon himself. They that go crisped and curled shall be clad in fleeces of many colours, and the garment without shall betoken that which is within. Prophecy, politics and place in Medieval England: From Geoffrey of Monmouth to Thomas of Erceeldoune.

The Prophecies of Merlin

But, it is doubtful if he would have mentioned them if they were not.

“Who Now Shall Believe That Liar, Merlin?”: The Prophecies of Merlin in History

In the same story we find Suibhne speaking of his herd of stags, to one of which he says, Thou stag that comest lowing to me across the glen, pleasant is the place for seats on the top of they antler-points.

Echoes of the Past and Present Crusades in Les Prophecies de Merlin

Although Robert of Gloucester probably never saw these prophecies, his son also died in the disaster. Why Merlin keeps focusing on events pertinent to Henry Blois must be obvious.
