

Temporal matters in social psychology - examining the role of time in the lives of groups and individuals

American Psychological Association - 楽天ブックス: Temporal Matters in Social Psychology: Examining the Role of Time in the Lives of Groups and Individuals

Description: -

- Social interaction

Social groups

Social psychology

Time -- Sociological aspects
Temporal matters in social psychology - examining the role of time in the lives of groups and individuals

- Temporal matters in social psychology - examining the role of time in the lives of groups and individuals

Notes: Includes bibliographical references (p. 185-209) and indexes

This edition was published in 2004

Filesize: 69.58 MB

Tags: #Read #Download #Social #Psychology #Matters #PDF

Social Comparison Theory

The face is one of the greatest representations of a person. This explains why we perceive people whose faces resemble those of babies to have childlike traits. Dopamine neuron from the ventral tegmental area codes the salience of social as well as nonsocial stimuli.

Social Psychological Face Perception: Why Appearance Matters

Although the more negative impressions of unattractive than average faces show some accuracy, there is presently no evidence of accuracy in the more negative impressions of average than attractive faces.

Social Psychological Face Perception: Why Appearance Matters

When dealing with facial expression recognition, recent research has found that people with this disorder are unable to recognize facial expressions that exhibit negative emotions, including fear, sadness, anger, and disgust. Consequently, an angry person is viewed not only as likely to act momentarily in an unaffiliative or dominant way, but also as likely to possess enduring low affiliative or high dominant traits.

Social cue

Because HIV can be transmitted through sexual activity and by sharing drug equipment, it evokes significant personal feelings and judgments in the general public, as well as in health and social service providers. In particular, displays of emotion may indicate approach, attack, or avoidance tendencies.

Chapter 8“Ethical Issues

However, the blunt and aggressive responses can also be due to the fact that the person is not communicating with the other person face to face.

The contribution of face familiarity to ingroup favoritism and stereotyping.

Social Comparison Theory

Additionally, how can a counselor realistically prevent a client from sharing contaminated syringes or having sex? Both students and teachers must read the cues to gather what is currently going on, how they are supposed to be doing something and the reason behind what they were doing. These results are consistent with the FFO hypothesis since, as noted earlier, the amygdala is activated more by emotionally salient stimuli. It is also noteworthy that impressions of happy faces were not due to a resemblance to babies.

Social Comparison Theory

Individuals use gaze following and seeking to provide information for gaze cuing when information is not provided in a verbal manner. In the African American culture it can be especially difficult for men to acknowledge their homosexuality. Ethics is a term that can imply lofty, philosophical discussions, far removed from the everyday world.

Marital Happiness, Marital Status, Health, and Longevity

More specifically, people with Social Anxiety disorder tend to have a negative bias towards both facial expressions and emotions, which leads them to interpret such cues that are normal and or happy as being negative.

Related Books

- Zi solovets'koho pekla na voliu - \(zapysky vtikacha\)
- Nambiia
- Ōmi Takamagahara no hakkutsu
- Patria nostra \(Vårt land\) canzone nazionale di Finlandia, tradotta dall'originale da fröken Esther
- Hard winter