Labour law

This produces two economies, the need economy and the accumulation economy locked in a relationship of subordination. The raise the status of trade union members in the industrial organization and in the society at large. A significant number of people from the colonies came to Belgium, France, the Netherlands, the UK, and in the 1970s, Portugal.

Industrial Relations

Both engaged simultaneously in exhibition, distribution and production, both aimed to develop a cinema by and for the working-class and were formed by people who were not at the time film professionals. The EU has offered Britain unprecedented tariff- and quota-free access to its single market of 450 million consumers.

Industrial Relations

What conclusions might we draw from these examples? Apart from these, in new industries like chemicals, petroleum, oil refining and distribution, aluminium, manufacture of electrical and other equipment, and automobile repairing, arrangements for settlement of disputes through voluntary agreements have become common in recent years.

Trafficking: A Development Approach

In this unique study Pete Lines examines in detail every aspect of the regiment: its composition, its involvement in the capture of the island of Guadeloupe; the desertions and punishments; and its eventual disbandment in Canada.

Child labour

First Phase: During the first phase, the British Government in India was largely interested in enforcing penalties for breach of contract and in regulating the conditions of work with a view to minimising the competitive advantages of indigenous employers against the British employers.

Communities of Resistance

The distinguished periods may help us to structure and understand the socio-demographic situations which migrants face today. The rise of more precarious work — often on zero-hours contracts and linked to the delivery- and internet-based economy — will only make the problem of low returns to labour worse, if we do not seek to address it.

Aalborg: The Academy for Migration Studies in Denmark, Aalborg University. It was only during the 19th century, and especially during its second half, that a number of factories were set up in Calcutta and Bombay-jute mills in Calcutta and cotton textile mills in Bombay. International students, for example, might become labour migrants upon graduation, and subsequently seek family reunification.
