A hundred years of immigration to Canada 1900

It established for the first time in law the main objectives of Canada's immigration policy. After the opening of the CPR, a new wave of immigration led not just to the creation of Vancouver and other newer urban settlements, but also to the settlement of numerous regions in the , especially the , , and.

5.3 Immigrants by the Numbers

They sailed from Sweden, where they were living under threat of forced repatriation to the Soviet Union. Canadian citizens are in general no longer subject to involuntary loss of citizenship, barring revocation on the grounds of immigration fraud or criminality. Quebec created its own department for immigration in 1968.

5.3 Immigrants by the Numbers

This is only one of the many changes included in this new amendment of the Citizenship Act.

Immigrant arrivals, 1913 to 1965

Chinese miners, merchants and ranchers enjoyed full rights to mineral tenure and land alienation and in some areas became the mainstay of the local economy for decades. In 1896, Minister of the Interior launched a program of settlement with offices and advertising in the United Kingdom and continental Europe. The railroad companies were sent to investigate potential immigration of farmers and glassworkers.

The Act, which took effect in 1978, was a radical break from the past. The return of peace in 1945 brought economic recovery and an immigration boom, which continued into the following decade. Distribution of immigrants provides a different sense of this change.
