How parents and kids can stay safe during the coronavirus pandemic

There are ways to play games and have fun with friends, even if you're not able to see them in person. Every time we go online, we're giving away information about ourselves. They may tell you to keep your distance from other people when you're out.

10 Safety Measures At Home You Should Teach Your Kids

Plus, their coats usually hang closely to one another, allowing lice to transfer easily to other students' belongings.

Winter safety: Advice for parents and kids

By doing so, you are greatly minimizing the possibility of accidents occurring in your home. You could print this off and stick on the bathroom mirror as an easy reminder for everyone to wash their hands more often.

Back to School Safety Tips for Parents in 2020

We want kids to play, we want everyone to be active, we want you to have fun—just in a way that keeps you at least six feet away from other individuals.

Teaching Kids to Be Safe Without Making Them Scared

Masks will not protect against the virus if worn incorrectly, so parents need to teach and model the right way, making sure the mask covers mouth, chin, and nose fully.

Winter safety: Advice for parents and kids

There are places where your kid will meet others in your absence, for example, at school. Teach your kid that it is dangerous to accept food from anyone.

Safety Tips

Talk with the principal about what you can do to increase school safety, such as organizing parents to form a neighborhood watch before and after school. Elementary school can be overwhelming, both for students and parents—even more so during a pandemic.
