Canadian Coast Guard

Dec 2017 Communications strategy Develop communications outreach plan for staff and trainees. By including senior-level regional leaders, the governance of the College will gain a regional perspective on training matters and the needs of the College can be elevated and championed at the senior decision-making level. In addition, the College is well positioned to address the existing gap in career management and counselling for CCG officers, by taking a greater role in the provision of support and guidance related to post-graduate career progression and certification.

For example, another institution might include campus services or perhaps other items as part of its administrative costs.

Canadian Coast Guard's Atlantic Region Welcomes 18 New Officers

Decisions about new assets or changes in the provision of Coast Guard services impact on the College. There are 7 rows, not including the title row.

Canadian Coast Guard's Atlantic Region Welcomes 18 New Officers

Overall Performance The evaluation found that the College graduates were competent, knowledgeable, and well prepared for their job in the CCG.

Become a fishery officer

About 19 percent of the survey respondents were of the opinion that the content taught at the College is not comprehensive, up-to-date or aligned with what is expected on ships. Recommendation 4: Rationale: A recent evaluation of the MCTS program recommends that the program develop and implement a sustainable staffing strategy. Nonetheless, the evaluation found that there is a gap in the clarity and guidance provided by the College related to some aspects of the at-sea practice.

Canadian Coast Guard's Atlantic Region Welcomes 18 New Officers

The current evaluation of the College found that there may be feasible alternative delivery models for the MCTS training e. Some further feedback suggested reviewing the ratio between the theoretical and practical content, coordinating course schedules to maximize the time spent on simulators, and providing more access for officer-cadets to the equipment for self-directed learning.

Officer Training Program

Rationale: Due to the challenging nature of the College programs, mental health concerns such as burnout, depression and chronic stress were identified by some officer-cadets. The Coast Guard meets most of these responsibilities through its Fleet and Maritime Communications and Traffic Services Centres, which rely on the College to provide essential training to their officers, as well as to Canadian Coast Guard technologists.
