Land reform

I am a Zimbabwean and I have personally experienced the land invasions. To cope with this, there is need for ALRO to develop its own valuation procedure along with an appropriate land transfer process which does not penalise those who have no other alternative than to transfer their land and at the same time which does not encourage others to part with the land for handsome profit. Millions of former farm workers have been evicted or are forced to work the land of new farmers for free in exchange for being allowed to remain in their homes on the farms.

Land Reform Management in Namibia, South Africa and Zimbabwe : A Comparative Perspective

Why is it, I wonder, that it was not possible for these people to do this in their own country? It is good news if only 7% of land has gone to cronies. The ALRO is principally responsible for provision of land to the farmers. Technical Committee, Inception Phase Framework Plan, paragraphs 1.
