Compared to trails in higher elevation mountain ranges, many falsely assume the AT to be relatively flat. Although many northern tribes had contact with people who wore sandals and shoes, including the ancient Egyptians and Greeks, and later Arabs and Persians from present-day Iran , a complete record of when or how Africans adopted foot coverings does not exist. The silhouette was long and lean, in part thanks to the popularization of Madeleine Vionnet's bias cut, a technique that allows fabric to drape over the body.
