I was told that until a few years ago there was a pane of glass in one of the upper windows, on which Moore had written a stanza with a diamond, but this has been removed and sold to a curiosity hunter. The site was bounded on the east by the canal which was here widened to form lay-bys and from which two branches were taken into the works.

So he gave his crack-brained hero who is fired with the notion of converting his fellow-countrymen the name of Wildgoose, and, with Tugwell for his Sancho Panza, he brought him up from the south of England to the hills of Derbyshire. But certainly until my grande opus is finished I could not possibly have a more rural or secluded corner to court the Muses in. Boswell's house the name is most appropriate on the other side of the street.
