Prothalamion

I think, if I remember what that was like. In these works I was trying to isolate this sensory threshold in order to allow viewers to occupy a suspended state where perceptual capacities can be challenged and expanded. The figures, lions, and many natural elements in the vitrines at Rockefeller Center are painted with tea.

TALLEY TRIO

I always want to try new things and push painting for myself and the viewer.

Till I End My Song: A Gathering of Last Poems by Harold Bloom

I really like the idea that it could translate into something that is nimble, something that moves—that kind of reminder was really intriguing.
