L'agression 1975, directed by Gérard Pirès

For they s t r i v e to probe the unique nature of man, his problems, and his experiences as he struggles to know and perfect both himself and the world. Miss Pringle notices with pleasure that Bulkington is reading one of her novels. Buell's unwashed, wild bikers appear as efficient, faceless contract killers — characters in conspiracy.

Moreover, the corollary of t h i s love involves suffering derived from a perception of one's own inadequacy as well as from a sense of the loved one's absence. At those points in his fiction when the fractured lives of his principal characters experience a mediating resolution to t h e i r suffering by means of sacramental grace, Buell's fiction becomes d i s t i n c t i v e l y Catholic.
