FACT: The Jews were not allowed to hold land in Italy and, as noted above, had to live in Jewish Ghettos where they were, at times, forced to wear red hats or other markers, so people knew they were Jews. Members of Ketley's society paid a monthly subscription to a central pool of funds which was used to finance the building of houses for members, which in turn acted as to attract further funding to the society, enabling further construction. Later, in and during the , lenders based in temples gave loans, while accepting and performing the.
