The holy war made by King Shaddai upon Diabolus, to regain the metropolis of the world; or, The losing and taking again of the town of Mansoul .. : Bunyan, John, 1628

This Diabolus is indeed a great and mighty prince, and yet both poor and beggarly. Now, if Emmanuel hates us, then Mansoul shall be slain, then Mansoul shall become a dunghill. This was carried in the affirmative, and the man that was designed by this stratagem to be destroyed was one Mr.

Captain, you have by your boldness given to Mansoul at least four summonses to subject herself to your King, by whose authority I know not, nor will I dispute that now. So word was carried to Emmanuel, and the Prince came out to the man. If the original book was published in multiple volumes then this reprint is of only one volume, not the whole set.

Or, more particularly, thus: The prisoners went down all in mourning: they put ropes upon themselves; they went on, smiting themselves on the breasts, but durst not lift up their eyes to heaven. Yet he had, for his malapertness, one of his legs broken, and he that did it wished it had been his neck.

So, as I said, he came up with his train to the gate, and laid his ambuscado for Captain Resistance within bow-shot of the town.

THE HOLY WAR JOHN BUNYAN

So, as was said, the brave Prince took his march to go to the town of Mansoul. And those that rode reformades, they went about to encourage the captains.
