Importantly, the shift was continual but not constant over the period studied.

Status of marine mammals in the North sea

The health assessment should include clinical and morpho-pathological, microbiological, virological, parasitological, serological and reproductive investigations on dead stranded and bycaught individuals as well as animals captured alive.

Richly diverse

Since then, large parts of the area as well as the harbour and the grey seal went under protection. Pup production in 2015 was the highest ever recorded in terms of both numbers 8,439 pups and pup percentage relative to moult counts 32 %. Numerous and several have been built, and as a result recent floods have resulted in few or no fatalities even if some dikes rarely and locally have been overrun in recent history.
