Short Stories: The Tell Tale Heart by Edgar Allan Poe

It is not bad - at first, and very gentle, but quite the subtlest, most enduring odor I ever met.

Nothing So Monstrous by STEINBECK, John

Oh, by the way, my speciality is literature, with an emphasis on first editions and signed books. Measuring whether people believe others should be difficult to do accurately, because simply asking the question disrupts the tendency to assume that other people are telling the truth.

Nothing So Monstrous (TV Episode 1954)

Maybe that's what he is doing.
