Shade Tree Borers

In the Central Valley, bare soil around trunks increases heat and dryness.

Insect Borers of Trees and Shrubs

Minimize injuries to bark when probing tunnels and be sure not to create large wounds in cambial tissue. SYMPTOMS The location of damage on the bark and the species of tree attacked aid in the identification of the insect involved.

Wood

Members of the rose family are favorite hosts of the roundheaded apple tree borer. By the time fine wood shavings accumulate on branches and at the base of a tree, the tree can no longer be rescued. Steve Katovich is an entomologist, USDA Forest Service.

Shade Tree Borers

Stinkbugs are shaped like a shield. The presence of piles of frass at the base of trees or on bark of larger branches is evidence of attack. If spotting does not appear on the bracts, the disease may not be severe on the leaves.

Disease and Insect Control for Homegrown Peaches and Plums

Older trees can tolerate more larvae. Keep weed trimmers and lawn mowers away from trunks; using mulch or a ground cover in a several-foot-wide area around the trunk will keep the area free of turf and other vegetation and eliminate the need for mowing. Their use generally requires hiring a licensed pest control applicator as the products available for home users are not effective.
