The World According to Barbara: GLASTONBURY ABBEY AND KING ARTHUR'S GRAVE

If you do want to see the Glastonbury Thorn in all its glory there are a few around town including one in the grounds of Glastonbury Abbey.

How Glastonbury Abbey's myths were invented by medieval monks on the make

The cost of clearing the site and returning it back to pasture land is about £800,000 per year and the local roads and train systems are often overloaded by visitors.

Mass and Prayer Guild

Glastonbury is famous for two things, its music and its mud.

Glastonbury

The Abbey was stripped of its valuables and its reigning Abbot, Richard Whiting, was hanged, drawn and quartered as a traitor to the crown. How did Indiana Jones get it so wrong?! It was part of a network of monasteries that by the year 1500 challenged the king.

Glastonbury in Somerset

Today, it's capped by the ruins of a church dedicated to St. Once a year though for a long weekend, the small town of less than 9,000 souls becomes host of the Glastonbury Festival as it has done since the first hippy inspired concert in 1970. Still today revered as holy grounds, the Abbey Ruins are the site of the first Christian Church in Europe, and are reputed to be the burial site of Joseph of Arimathea, The Virgin Mary, Saint Patrick and King Arthur.

How Glastonbury Abbey's myths were invented by medieval monks on the make

More and more pilgrims came to worship at the Great Church and the monks built complex waterways to manage their land that stretched all the way to the Bristol Channel. This was accentuated and embittered by a personal rivalry due to the claim of both churches to possess the body of the great.
