Despite its changing mission over the years, the MRC today still retains the original mixture of Army engineers, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration representatives, and civilian members prescribed by the founding Act of 1879. Five months later, the secretary of war instructed Humphreys to organize an engineer board to investigate the impacts of the Eads Bridge on steamboat traffic. With levee building and clearing in the nineteenth century and damming, dredging, and floodway construction in the twentieth, the basin was converted from a vast forested swamp into a designer wetland, where human aspirations and nature maintained a precarious equilibrium.
