The downfall of the Liberal party, 1914

Four years later they suffered irreparable losses at the polls, and by 1935 this historic Party ceased to exist in any effective sense.

the downfall of the liberal party by wilson trevor

As the author makes clear, Liberal England was already beset with internal violence in 1914. I doubt if any historian has determined upon it as a profession without strong emotional and intellectual factors playing the dominant part.

In h This penetrating survey traces the sudden and dramatic decline of the British Liberal Party following the outbreak of World War I.

'The Downfall of the Liberal Party, 1914

In 1914 the Liberals were the ruling political force in Britain. In 1914 the Liberals were the ruling political force in Britain. The war struck the final blow at the Liberals, who were traditionally opposed to conscription and conformity, and the conduct of military operations destroyed what unanimity and mutual confidence were left.

'The Downfall of the Liberal Party, 1914

The pressure under which the Asquith government gave way to introduce censorship and the draconian Defence of the Realm Act left many Liberals doubtful that the party was still a fit custodian of their values... The greatest strength of this book is that it is a joy to read, particularly if the reader already has a firm grasp of the framework of events and personalities. I think it was in 1958, when the entire Treasury team resigned, that the Economist likened the break-up of the then Government to a slow-motion film of a car crashing.

The Downfall Of The Liberal Party, 1914 1935 by Trevor Wilson

This pondeltig is given additional emphasis by reading Dr Trevor Wilson's detailed account of the death agonies of the Liberal party from 1914 to 1935. Dr Wilson seems to me to see the creation of the 1915 Coalition too much in terms of a successful Tory campaign to destroy the Liberal government. It may have been that the fortunes of the then Government were in decline, but this did not mean that the Liberal party itself was facing disintegration and collapse.
