Glamorgan Antiques

Quite often, the small supports called 'spurs' on which a pot was fired are fused to the glazed surface and sometimes we find a whole stack of dishes, collapsed and fused together.

Glamorgan Antiques

The name was soon adopted for Italian-made lustre pottery copying Spanish examples, and during the 16th century, its meaning shifted to include all tin-glazed earthenware.

Between 1530 to 1542 Xanto signed many of his works.

How to Recognize Authentic Staffordshire Pottery

Bauer also made three sizes of swans in Cal-Art.

Staffordshire Dogs

Rather, they were the skilled craftsmen responsible for assembling figures and certain wares from the constituent parts formed in plaster piece-moulds. If the dogs faced each other, it meant her husband was out at sea, welcoming her lover in to the house. French artist potters of the late 19th century also used the term to describe stonewares or porcelains with brilliant but unpredictable red flambé glazes based on oriental prototypes.
