Difference Between Natural Science and Social Science

These classes expand on foundational concepts taught in associate programs by providing a greater level of breadth and depth in each subject area. Topics include: ethics, religion, and sexuality; conception, pregnancy, and childbirth; contraception and abortion; sexually transmitted diseases; gender roles, female sexuality, and male sexuality; sexual orientation: gay, straight or bisexual; sexual coercion; commercial sex; and variation in sexual behaviour. Additionally, many community colleges offer online associate programs, helping students meet family and work responsibilities while working towards a degree.

Where Technology and Intelligence Meet the Social Sciences

Associate Degrees Associate programs typically require about 60 credits and take two years of full-time enrollment to complete. In other words the purpose of both science are description, explanation, prediction and control of event.
