THE MAN WHO DID THE RIGHT THING

From Eastern Canada by ox-cart and canoe, across the boundless prairies and down the rushing, rolling river-canyons: from Merrie England, Rugged Wales and Scotland, from the tempestuous Emerald Isle and gay Old France; they followed Magellan's route, in wind-blown ships, across the wide Atlantic, through his strait the graveyard of a thousand wrecks, around Cape Horn, where three great oceans meet and gnash their teeth against the foam-flecked cliffs; then up the full length of the stormy, western coasts of South and North America; to a haven in Puget Sound or Fraser River; thence by stage, pack-train and river-boat to the Sunny Okanagan; to their eventual homes between the grassy hills and fir-clad slopes of White Valley.

I asked St. Pierre if he would be interested in running again. He took the precaution to turn from the road and make his way through the thicket, where the tropical vegetation was so dense about him that he could see nothing in front of him even, when various sounds led him to believe that he was almost upon the house.

The Peninsula Times

On the lower floor were parlor, bedroom dining room, kitchen, entrance-hall, large public room with pool and card tables, a small office and a bar-room.
