Thucydides set out to write a truthful account of the Peloponnesian war, but his work reflects his Athenian fourth-century B. In the second part he attempts to answer the question why Thucydides has told us so little about the War that we find accurate, consistent, or relevant. Psychology was reduced to the simple motivations of fear, honor, and greed.

Most conspicuously he has inspired Professor Graham Allison, a political scientist based at Harvard, to create the notion of the Thucydides trap, a model which paints a bleak picture of US-Chinese relations and claims to show policy makers how to avoid war. However, what has been missing among this plethora of activity is an account of how and why Thucydides became enthroned in international relations as the founder of the discipline and a key practitioner. As such it has created quite a storm, generating a flurry of both journalistic and scholarly articles, a TED talk, and endorsements from, among others, Joe Biden, Henry Kissinger, Ban Ki-Moon, and David Petraeus.
