Scared of the Dark

Suppose you wake up in the night and need a drink of water. We are happy to acknowledge Lisa Suhay's generosity in allowing us to reproduce this story for MidEastWeb. Many of the options are 6-image sets, so your child can choose an image to project every night — making bedtime a little more fun.

If this is the case, many experts suggest getting your child a companion, such as a pet fish, hamster or dog to help them feel not so alone at night.

Night Light : A Story for Children Afraid of the Dark

Newer models let your child talk into the monitor and hear you talk back, reassuring him that you're still there even when you're out of sight. Also, the creatures are a bit creepy looking, and I'm not sure a story about creepy little gremlin children who only come out when it is dark would make kids who are afraid of the dark feel better.
