In the next decade the industry will spread to places like Gouda, Enkhuizen, Rotterdam, Delft and Schoonhoven. No production figures are known for the R.

Excavations at Church Street

Its history dates back to the Appomatus Indians and their cottage industry of clay pipes. Hooper had previously acquired and demolished the earlier building on the site that was believed to be 16 th century.

Museum of London Archaeology (MOLA) Datasets

The latter assemblage was dated by Beckey to the 1850s, and is likely to be waste from the workshop of the Bye family of Ayers Lane, a similar family-run concern Beckey.

Dutch Clay Pipes

BTW, great article on Escudo. This assumption is supported by two pieces of evidence. Changes and variations in form can be traced at roughly 30-year intervals, providing an invaluable guide to dating that remains the basis of current clay pipe studies.

Bannerman Family of Clay Tobacco Pipe Makers

This remained the principal means of marking pipes right through to the 20th century, although stamped marks on the bowl became popular in the Victorian era, together with full names and addresses stamped or moulded along the stem.
