History Ireland

Many were members of the atrocity-prone yeomanries of Carnew, Tinahely and Rathdrum for whom no friendly intercession was likely; Hessians and Ancient Britons were typically executed to avenge their brutality towards prisoners, women and non-combatants.

The Tragedy of Daniel Cunniam

Daily arrests tightened the noose around the fugitive city leadership in which command devolved on the coterie attached to Samuel Neilson.

Irish Convicts to NSW

In 2002, in Bungendore near , a family reunion took place, with Michael Dwyer's descendants joining descendants of related Australian Irish families, the Donoghoe's and the Doyles. Please help to this article by more precise citations.

Day in May that saw the disastrous beginning of Irish rebellion in which 30,000 were to die

Upon spotting the small force standing on the road, the pursuing British quickened their pace and charged forwards, assuming that they were facing only the rearguard of the fleeing column. In May 1898 the coincidence of the planned closure of the cemetery and centenary celebrations for the 1798 rebellion suggested the second re-interment of Dwyer and his wife in , where a substantial memorial was erected in 1900. I included an account of this event in my recently published book — Aghowle -Where The Devil Ate The Tinker.

1798 Rebellion

All this time the Protestants of the town were in terror of their lives, and a great many of them sought and obtained the protection of the Catholic priests, who everywhere exerted themselves, and with success, to prevent outrage. They fared better however in the next encounter. Here he evidently contracted dysentery, to which he succumbed in August 1825.

Battle of Ballyellis

Methods adopted included attempts to deny him shelter among the civilian population by severely punishing those suspected of harbouring his men, the offer of huge rewards for information, the assigning of thousands of troops to Wicklow, and the building of a series of at , , and and a through county Wicklow. Matthew Stout Joseph became a recruiter and was evidently elected to the position of captain before the close of 1797.
