Sweeter is it to me than the sound of the South Wind sighing, or the rollers thundering on the beach, or the splash of rivulets tumbling down through rocky glens. We have the work almost in its entirety.

Works in the Packard Humanities Institute's Classical Latin Texts

Fetch ashes, Amaryllis, out of doors, and fling them across thy head into the running brook: and look not back. The soil will not feel the hoe: nor the vine the pruning hook: the strong ploughman too will free his oxen from the yoke: wool will no longer be taught to counterfeit varied colours, the ram in the meadow will change his fleece of himself, now to a sweet blushing purple, now to a saffron yellow: scarlet will clothe the browsing lambs of its own accord.

Saint Clement of Alexandria

Eusebius of Caesarea

Menalcas: O, endlessly unlucky flock! This is source criticism, or Quellenforschung, at its most vulnerable. Your cattle will come through the fields to drink here themselves, here Mincius borders his green shores with tender reeds, and the swarm buzzes from the sacred oak. The sheep too stand round; nor are they ashamed of us, nor be thou ashamed of thy flock, O divine poet: even fair Adonis pastured sheep by the river.
