- - Robert de Bellomont came into England with the Conqueror, and contributed mainly to the Norman triumph at Hastings. This Robert inherited the Earldom of Meullent in Normandy, from his mother Adeliza de Waleran. Of his conduct at Hastings it is said: A certain Norman young soldier, making his first onset in that fight, did what deserved lasting fame, boldly charging and breaking in upon the enemy, with that regiment which he commanded in the right wing of the For these gallant services he obtained sixty-four lordships in Warwickshire, and many others in Leicester, Wilts, Northampton, Gloucester, in all ninety-one. His lordship did not, however, arrive at the dignity of the English peerage before the reign of Henry I, when that monarch created him Earl of Leicester. !M/2 date 1096 (DIV) Ancestral File Number: 9FTX-N3Robert de Bellomont, or Beaumont (sonof Roger, grandson of Turlof [Tourade] of Pont Audomere by Wevia, sisterto Gunnora, wife of Richard I, Duc de Normandie), came into England withthe Conqueror and contributed mainly to the Norman triumph at Hastings.This Robert inherited the earldom of Mellent in Normandie from his motherAdelina, dau. of Waleran, and sister of Hugh (who took the habit of monkin the abbey of Bec), both Earls of Mellent. of his conduct at Hastings,William Pictavensis thus speaks: certain Norman young soldier, son ofRoger de Bellomont, nephew and heir to Hugh, Earl of Mellent, by Adelinahis sister, making the first onset in that fight, did what deservethlasting fame, boldly charging and breaking in upon the enemy with thatregiment which he commanded in the right wing of the for whichgallant services he obtained sixty-four lordships in Warwickshire,sixteen in Leicestershire, seven in Wiltshire, three in Northamptonshire,and one in Gloucestershire, in all ninety-one. His lordship did nothowever arrive at the dignity of the English peerage before the reign ofHenry I, when that monarch created him Earl of Leicester. The mode bywhich he attained this honour is thus stated by an ancient writer: of Leicester had then four lords, viz., the king, the bishop ofLincoln, Earl Simon, and Yvo, the son of Hugh de Grentmesnel. This Earlof Mellent, by favour of the king, cunningly entering it on that sidewhich belonged to Yvo (then governor thereof, as also sheriff and theking's farmer there), subjecting it wholly to himself, and by this means,being made an earl in England, exceeded all the nobles of the realm inriches and His lordship m. 1096, Isabel, dau. of Hugh, Earl ofVermandois, and had issue,
