Understanding Key Performance Indicators for Employee Training Programs

Whether employees are able to translate learned information to their jobs, is an important KPI to measure the effectiveness of training. In a Ehsan Memari describes some of the KPIs you can track using a learning management system — and there are tons more on top of these! If you are a high environment where you need to deliver on time, then measuring the elapsed time to create your product or service might be the best measure for you to use. Employees must be able to honestly discuss performance and consider how to make improvements in order to move forward.
