And how filmic events, and the ways they have been staged, acted, framed, photographed and edited exactly influence and prompt acts of imagination on the part of audiences, has only in part been understood. In 1988, Noel Carroll published a critique of contemporary film theory Mystifying Movies which he criticized as being overly determined by Psycho-Semiotic Marxist paradigms. Sergei Eisenstein The director Sergei Mikhailovich Eisenstein remains a central figure in formalist film theory and by helping to develop the above idea of time created through montage.
