USDA helped landowners develop conservation plans and enrolled a record number of acres of private working lands in conservation programs, working with more than 500,000 farmers and ranchers to implement conservation practices that clean the air we breathe, conserve and clean the water we drink, prevent soil erosion and create and protect wildlife habitat. Access Note: Access to the Recreation Area is through tunnels that restrict vehicle size to less than 12 feet in height and width dirt and gravel in the tunnel can lower the height by several inches. The combination of the conservation easement tool and the EPF have delivered the most successful conservation results in decades while positioning New York State well to ensure our forests continue to provide environmental and economic benefits into the future.
