Bahr repeated and underscored both points in a final paper for Brandt before taking off for the Crimea: 1 The talks with Brezhnev should help to soften the attitude of the GDR.

Cybertelecom :: Birth of ARPANET 1967

It keeps the management informed about the progress of the work and difficulties faced in performance. The contract signed by Thyssen and the Soviet Union in April 1969 for delivery of gas pipes and the February 1970 natural gas pipeline deal signaled a new start in West German—Soviet commercial relations and were also of symbolic political importance. This type of encounter at the highest level was new not only in West German—Soviet relations but also in East-West relations generally.

The sentiment was shared by Chancellor Kiesinger who, only two days after the occupation of Czechoslovakia, used almost the same wording. In the first half of the 1970s, a special forum for European issues, the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe CSCE , emerged, bringing together all European states except for Albania and producing results with far-reaching effects on the further course of East-West relations. Rapprochement with the West seemed to be leading to change in Czechoslovakia.
