Fisher feels that unless we follow the Gandhian model, we are leading to a situation where Capitalists — a microscopic minority of society — will become all too powerful.

Gandhian Model of Development

The Kumarappa Institute of Gram Swaraj or KGS, created in 1967, elaborated and developed his methods toward a development that was based on balance and autonomy.

Gandhian development

Those who are the most affected when governments are forced to change their priorities are usually the poor, women and agricultural workers : Many developing countries used to provide free education until the adherence to an IMF structural adjustment programme for e. Kumarappa recognized clearly that the world was not made for a complete non-violent cooperation among its different elements.

Mahatma Gandhi and the Sustainable Development Goals

Trusteeship for Gandhi is a dynamic concept that can bring change in the established institutions. And few have the openness for innovative thinking, strategies and ways of doing.
