Responding to Natural Disasters

More than treaties and checklists, planning for emergency response requires adoption of a human rights perspective or mindset. They often need safe refuge and an end to the violence, and a long-term way to reduce the risk of disasters they will face in the future. It brought flooding to

The majority of those who die in natural disasters are women. This is a safe space for individuals to be unapologetically who they are. Responding to natural disasters has traditionally been seen as a compassionate response to people in need.

Natural Disasters, Conflict, and Human Rights: Tracing the Connections

There are cases where natural disasters occur in places where conflict has already disrupted the lives of people, for example, the Philippines, Iraq, Somalia, Kenya, Colombia, and Haiti.
