Collections of Documents and Sources (18th Century)

There are said to be ten thousand merchants and their employés in the building, and certainly the number is little if any exaggerated. They had songs and speeches, and a pleasant evening generally; and as all were intimate, and of the same nationality, they were not at all cautious about their conversation. One day the master enters the kitchen and finds the mujik there.

How Putin Built an Empire of Tyrants and Failing States

The government wanted a university in every region, a secondary school in every provincial center, and a primary school in every district. Peace in Baltic region added to this free time. Many Latvian and Estonian Lutherans moved east into Russia, but the Lithuanian Catholics emigrated westward, often to the United States.
