Federal :: Indian Child Welfare Act Proceedings

Comment: A commenter suggested BIA compile a list of which reservations are subject to a Tribe's exclusive jurisdiction for child-welfare Start Printed Page 38809proceedings and make this information readily available to States, to allow them to determine whether the Tribe exercises exclusive jurisdiction over a particular reservation. Some suggested adding new examples.

Where there is a known or suspected congenital anomaly either structural or genetic , the care during labour and birth may vary.

Federal :: Indian Child Welfare Act Proceedings

First, the fact that many Indians live off-reservation is, in part, a result of past, now-repudiated Federal policies encouraging Indian assimilation with non-Indians and, in some cases, terminating Tribes outright.

Chapter 4: Care during labour and birth

More recently, the Department determined that it may be appropriate and necessary to promulgate additional and updated rules interpreting ICWA and providing uniform standards for State courts to follow in applying the Federal law. The Mother-friendly Childbirth Initiative has suggested an induction rate of 10% or less is ideal. This, in turn, has impeded the statutory intent of providing minimum Federal standards that would protect Indian children, families, and Tribes, and has allowed problems identified in the 1970s to remain in the present day.
