Moreover, he saw Russia as obsessed by a populist drive to perfect society through redistribution and faulted them for their penchant for dividing all humanity into friends and enemies. Ibn Hazm was well versed in many branches of knowledge, including hadith, and he excelled in writing both poetry and prose. No one who has the least amount of knowledge and of scholars will have any doubt that Ibn Hazm was very smart and was very quick-witted, and he had a great deal of respect for the Sunnah and hadith.

In his essay, he argued that the intelligentsia owed its identity to standing apart from the government because it had coalesced in the 1840s under the impact of atheistic socialism. Summary A collection of essays first published in Moscow in 1909. Yet despite that he was the one who tried to find interpretations other than the apparent meaning when dealing with basic issues and the verses and hadiths that speak of the divine attributes, because he first of all acquired deep knowledge of dialectics mantiq , which he learned from Muhammad ibn al-Hasan al-Madhhaji al-Kinaani al-Qurtubi, as was mentioned by Ibn Maakoolaa and Ibn Khallikaan.

His wording was in agreement with Ahl al-hadith but the meanings were in harmony with the other group. Writing from various points of view, the authors reflect the diverse experiences of Russia's failed 1905 revolution. Hence we cannot say of him that he is one of Ahl as-Sunnah in an absolute sense, or with regard to issues of the divine attributes in particular, although he did not step beyond the bounds of the Sunnah and its people altogether, to such an extent that he could be regarded as an innovator, because of his veneration for the Sunnah and his encouragement to people to follow it and shun that which went against it.
