Trend	Main characteristics	Theories
Culture perceived as a relatively autonomous set of elements within the social system	The influence resulted from this trend was in place until the end of the 1950s. The main aspect is the functions that cultural norms and values play in guiding social action	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Émile Durkheim's sociological theory; • Scientific theory of culture, (Malinowski); • Talcott Parsons' Social action theory; • Theory of cultural superstructures (Pierre Bourdieu).
Focus on the structural aspect and on the constructive function of the symbols referring to social reality	Theories that emerge from the 1960s, highlighting the connection between the dynamics, the social interactions and the cultural forms.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Lévi-Strauss structuralist theory; • Ferdinand de Saussure's linguistic theory; • Structural-functional theory of phonology (Roman Jakobson); • Symbolic interactionism (George Mead and Erving Goffman, among others); • Social construction of reality (Alfred Schütz; Peter Berger and Thomas Luckmann); • Ethnomethodology (Harold Garfinkel).
Culture is considered a variety of sets comprised by ways to do and behave	From the 1980s, the focus on practices and traits in different situations was highlighted, on account of requirements put to the several strategies in concrete social situations	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Luhmann's systems theory (reducing complexity); • Production of society (Alain Touraine); • Theory focusing on practices and strategies for action transcending objectivity and subjectivity (Pierre Bourdieu, Anthony Giddens, Ann Siedler and Margaret Archer, among others).

Erving Goffman

Goffman and Social Organization: Studies of a Sociological Legacy. The social frameworks are built on natural frameworks. Socrates believed that the unexamined life is not worth living and extolled bios philosophicus or bios theoretikos.

Goffman and Social Organization: Studies of a Sociological Legacy / Edition 1 by Greg Smith

My class and I recently had a sociological adventure with the works of Erving Goffman.
