Community Archaeology

Historical Archaeology 27 1 :3. Plenum Press, New York, NY. However, there has been a growing realisation that people in the two German states must have had some, if at times very limited, contact with one another.

Using archaeology to understand the past, present, future of climate change

From the Roman era to the present day, delves deeper into the hidden past of Bishop Auckland, County Durham. And what happens when analysis is complete and the task turns to interpreting information and presenting results? The fact that these often straddled the frontier meant that Germans on both sides of the border had to interact with one another as the actions of one side could have a detrimental effect on the other. .
