In the bottom right and left hand corners, the seignior Julius and his lady reap the wealth of their estate. Serpentine imagery is also associated with other Mesoamerican deities, particularly Xiuhtecuhtli and Tlaloc.

Ancient Roman mosaics at the Museum of Bardo in Tunis

The first curators of the Museum, René Marie du Coudray de La Blanchère and Paul Gauckler, two young French archaeologists, were aware however that while Tunisia did not have ancient statues of a particular interest, its Roman floor mosaics were of a superior quality and deserved a place of honour in the Museum collections. The halls are of great size, very handsomely painted and gilt, and the walls covered entirely with tiles of native manufacture, but of European design.
