The English follow the principle that when one lies, one should lie big, and stick to it. Reproduction of material from any Salon pages without written permission is strictly prohibited.

Big lie

The military is a tougher nut to crack, but its leaders are drawn from a pool not that different from those who run universities and corporations, and these leaders crave approval from the same elites. Historian says the Nazis used the idea of the original big lie to turn sentiment against Jews and bring about.

Big lie

Das ist natürlich für die Betroffenen mehr als peinlich. That Americans predisposed to assume that President Biden had taken office only after a massive effort to steal the vote would consider the collapse of every effort to prove that point as evidence that perhaps that wasn't what happened. Since she chose to remain anonymous it is an unreliable source.

The Washington Post confessed to a very big lie

This was spread by right-wing groups, including the Nazis. Writing at the Daily Beast, : Six months after the attack on the Capitol triggered by that lie, commentators, political scientists, and families around the dinner table still struggle to come to grips with perverse reality. They will not lose money, they will not be subject to criminal charges, Gardner will not lose her job, they will not experience humiliation within their community, no one is going to sue, and it's doubtful that anyone at the Post believes that these grotesque lies will see their being called to account before their God for having defamed the president of the United States.

And that means sound economic theory and policy in the Misesian tradition. CIA The above quote appears in the report, , by , which is available from the US National Archives.

Why are a third of us such gullible rubes? Not so much members of the armed forces speaking in their official capacity, which is what happened last week after Tucker Carlson of Fox News dared to comment about the role of women in the military. Second, as long as there are no consequences, and there never are, it's irrelevant that the Washington Post behaved in a morally corrupt, fraudulent way. It thus becomes vitally important for the State to use all of its powers to repress dissent, for the truth is the mortal enemy of the lie, and thus by extension, the truth is the greatest enemy of the State.
