Education Police and detective applicants must have at least a high school diploma or equivalent, although some federal agencies and police departments may require that applicants have completed college coursework or a college degree. Although promotion normally includes an increase in , it also brings with it an increase in responsibility and for most, an increase in administrative paperwork.

Police ranks of the United States

The best evidence in any crime is a direct confession, and police officers have the right to use psychological techniques, misdirection, and lies to encourage a criminal to confess. Some agencies, such as the New Jersey State Police, use a para-militaristic range of sergeant ranks, such as staff sergeant and sergeant first class, in addition to the basic sergeant rank.

Capitol riot: Police officer says leadership left force unprepared

FBI special agents must work at least 50 hours a week and are on call 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Rules and guidelines dictate how an officer should behave within the community, and in many contexts, restrictions are placed on what the uniformed officer wears. In large cities, officers are usually given very specific job duties or will be assigned to a fraud, murder, drug-trafficking, or rape unit.
