This objection is sound, but also trivial, for it could be raised also with regard to the central nerves system of the higher animals. A normal sentence can reversed moved become by this exchange into the twilight: Suddenly I die namely. Flugel—from the German, wing Stone—from the earth, you grounded me.

Years ago, Hans Magnus Enzensberger wrote a program for a machine designed to produce a number of poems exceeding the number of atoms in the universe: to be exact, the program allows for 10 to the power of 36 texts. To be sure I die entirely. Unlike Heidegger, he has received little attention from great philosophers and theologians of the world.
