Germany and the Approach of War in 1914 by Volker R. Berghahn

To triumph, they spent large sums of money on overt and covert activities, from tours of American orchestras to the often secret funding of European publications and intellectual congresses by the CIA. It is about the psychology which made possible Hiroshima, the Nazi genocide, the Gulag, the Chinese Cultural Revolution, Pol Pot's Cambodia, Rwanda, Bosnia and many other atrocities. And yet its causes, both long term and immediate, have continued to be shrouded in mystery.

His account of the lead-up to war shows that there were leading people--particularly the military-- who wanted war in 1914 because they thought Germany could win at that time and that if war came later the chance of Germany winning would be less. They believed that the United States had two culture wars to win: one against the Soviet Bloc as part of the larger struggle against communism and the other against deeply rooted negative views of America as a civilization. Things cannot go on as at present, the burden of military expenditure is crushing people and the Kaiser and his government are fully alive to the fact.
