The , in 1765, were the first to settle , but they were driven off in 1770 by the , who had bought out the French settlement about 1767.

Air War in the Falklands

Sheffield was deaf to the tell-tale Exocet seeker radar at the time as the ESM equipment on board had been switched off to enable the use of the satellite transceiver. In the Falklands, the British Royal Navy suffered its first losses of ships since the Second World War, nearly four decades earlier.

Effects of Falklands War

The crews were also learning how to nurse the aircraft in harsh conditions.

Falkland Islands War

The war was never officially declared although both sides did declare the Islands areas a war zone and officially recognized that a state of war existed between them. The pilot had little chance to celebrate; his compatriots at Goose Green shot him down, and he died in the crash. You got used to it.

Air War in the Falklands

British sent his five cruisers after the smaller German ships two were sunk later and one escaped and faced Spee with his two battle cruisers. The missile is a British built man-portable surface-to-air missile used by both sides during the conflict. The crew would have to divert to Brazil.
