G.P.O. - The AUC Equation: How Vanco Monitoring With First

Software: L3

We are already doing Trigger Leveling!

Nodes contain an internal queue of events which is probably never more than 1 second deep (3 events).

4 events/second * 2500 seconds = 10000 events
 10000 events * 2MB/events = 20000 MB = 20GB
 A lot of memory... but not a lot of disk space!

To first order turning on trigger leveling is just making this queue deeper.
 Queue depths of 9 minutes or so are within the Linux address space capability. Longer queue times will require anchoring a backlog store in a disk file instead of swap space. Probably take someone in our group one week of full time work to get this up, running, and debugged.

But there could be synchronization issues required for the DL/Cr etc. which would require more work from us. The routing master would have to be more clever about which nodes it sends events to..

It happens when we look for something that only solves the immediate problem without considering the consequences. You will be slicing into control panels frequently on First Order missions.

In conclusion, using first-order PK equations is one approach to adhering to the AUC-based dosing recommendation from the new vanco guidelines. They are a one-time use and can get costly to purchase, so save all the ones you get as rewards for when you need them.
