Description: -

REASONS TO RESTRICT SMOKING	REASONS NOT TO RESTRICT SMOKING
• Employee demand	• The shrinking population of smokers leaves a residue of "hard core" smokers in the workplace who may experience severe withdrawal symptoms.
• Absenteeism and lost productivity due to illness and smoking	• Employees who smoke may feel ostracized by the company
• Desire to demonstrate company's concern for employee well-being	• Reduction in productivity due to time lost by employees who must go off the premises to smoke
• Opportunity to be a corporate leader on an issue before it is mandated through legislation	• Negative impact on client relationships due to economic conflicts of interest (revenue from tobacco companies)
• May provide smokers with an incentive to quit	• Adverse reaction of clients who wish to smoke while on company premises
• Fulfils the duty to provide a safe, healthful work environment	• Difficulty of monitoring and ensuring compliance with the policy
• May reduce inefficiencies and errors related to factors such as eye irritation and illness while on the job	• Mobility of the workforce and high turnover may inhibit realizing the health benefits of the policy
• Potential to realize savings on health benefits	• Relatively long time required for smoking cessation to produce the notable economic consequences of reduced chronic disease will delay the beneficial effect on the "bottom line"
• Combats the perception of a "privileged class" based on the law permitting smoking in private offices only
• Avoids extra cleaning costs and damage to furniture and equipment due to cigarette burns and smoke
