Malva Schalek Prague 1882—Auschwitz 1944 , a daughter of a well-to-do, cultured Jewish family in Prague, established her reputation as an artist in Vienna, specialized in portraits, and was interned in Theresienstadt, where she continued painting her fellow inmates. This tendency was especially pronounced in Kaufmann's works portraying an idealized image of the Galician Hasidism. In Italy, family badges — all but coats of arms — were added.

A guide to Renaissance bronzes

He began again to exhibit regularly, moved back to Belfast and was by now regarded one of the leading painters working in Ireland.
