Kolb and Wengert's team of leading Reformation historians was augmented by consultation with one hundred other scholars and teachers who use The Book of Concord continually, and two other teams of scholars who have reviewed the translations. This is an extensively revised translation, based on the Tappert edition and the 11th edition of the German Bekenntnisschriften der evangelisch-lutherischen Kirche. The 28 articles of the Augsburg Confession, 21 taking doctrinal positions and 7 explaining various reform efforts, was read before the emperor at the Diet of Augsburg on June 25, 1530, in a German version.

The Scripture quotations are based on the New Revised Standard Version. A review of the text in light of a mountain of new scholarship and other factors dictated the new translation and apparatus, including changes in the English language over the past forty years, differences in the training and preparation of seminarians and pastors, limitations in the introductions and annotations to the various parts of the book, new knowledge of the history and theology of these very documents, and the occasional error in Tappert's translation. ### The Book of Concord: The Confessions of the Evangelical Lutheran Church by Theodore G. Tappert

This book provides a very solid doctrinal foundation and provides insight into the foundational principles of the Lutheran church. Only occasionally does one hear an enlightening reference to the confessional writings in sermons by ordained pastors. After having a chance to read more of this new translation of the Book of Concord, I still conclude that this book is--overall--very good.
