Outdoor Ethics/Leave No Trace

A horse party heading off cross-country in mountains or timber will often run into many obstacles. Keep wildlife out of your personal rations by properly storing food and trash. Your bedsite should not look worse than that, when you're finished using that space.

The car in front of us lost traction as it struggled to climb out of a sandy 6 inch gully which would not have been an issue for any small SUV, but a different story from an Infinity car. The trail was seldom used and overgrown in places. An avalanche rips through a basin in Bariloche, Argentina, taking out unsuspecting skiers and snowboarders in its path.

Hobbles This method of restraint causes very little environmental impact. When setting up the rope corral, use an area with hard, rocky ground. Manure piles should be kicked apart, and scattered, and pawed ground should be filled in.

Leave No Trace: Why Backcountry Ethics Matter

A lightweight candle lantern or small gas lantern makes a pleasant alternative light source.
